ROFRANO'S NAME AGAIN MENTIONED IN MURDER TRIAL

Witness Says He Was Told
City Officer Gave Money for Killing of Giamari.

"HE HAD TO BE KILLED."

Remark That La Salle Asserts
Cornell, Who Is on Trial,
Made to Him.

Joe La Salle, the Sing Sing convict who is testifying for the State in the trial of Rocco Carnivale, alias Rocco Cornell, for procuring the murder of Mike Giamari, political lieutenant of ex-Sheriff Thomas F. Foley in the Second Assembly District, told the jury before Supreme Court Justice Vernon M. Davis to-day, of conversations he had with Carnivale concerning the killing of Giamari.

"Carnivale told me that after Giamari was killed," La Salle testified, "they were going to clean up James Street and get rid of Giamari's friends."

"Who in particular?" asked Assistant District Attorney Broderick.

"Mike Santangelo," replied La Salle.

"Carnivale told me Santangelo had double crossed Mike Rofrano [the present Deputy Street Cleaning Commissioner] years ago and was now close to Foley."

"We want to go back to James Street," La Salle testified Carnivale told him, "without running the chance of being searched and arrested every time we go there."

Carnivale used to live in James Street and was known there as the Czar until Giamari got in the ascendancy.

On Jan. 5, La Salle testified, while he was in hiding in Carnivale's home in Brooklyn the latter told him he would have to go away.

"When I asked him why," La Salle testified, "he told me they were going after Giamari the next day and (he) didn't want me in the house in case the police searched it.

"Carnivale told me that Rofrano wanted to get rid of Giamari because he was too popular and held too much influence among the Italians in the Second District."

La Salle said that that night he went to a house at Coney Island and then went to Troy.

Asked about a conversation with Carnivale at Twenty-fifth Street and Seventh Avenue one night in December, 1914, La Salle said that Carnivale told him that Giamari had to be killed and that he had the money for it from Rofrano.

"He told me," La Salle said, referring to his conversation that night with Carnivale, "that he and Fennimore were in Boston the night Mike Giamari was killed, Dec. 12, 1914, and when he got the telegram saying Giamari had been cut he and Fennimore opened a bottle of wine. He said that Giamari hadn't been hurt much but they would get him later on."

La Salle then told of conversations he had with Carnivale and Fennimore in the Tombs one Sunday in April last after he (La Salle) had surrendered for the murder of James Minott.

"Some one told Carnivale I was going to equal," La Salle told the jury, "and he begged me not to do it. He said if I did I would probably get off with a light sentence and he and Fennimore would have to go to the chair."

La Salle said he had seen Carnivale give Montimago, the convicted slayer of Giamari, money while the two were planning the murder.

In the course of his cross examination by Lloyd Stryker, attorney for Carnivale, La Salle said:

"Carnivale told me that Rofrano had been paying him $50 a week for two years with the understanding that Giamari was to be killed. Rofrano got tired of paying so much. Carnivale told me, and had cut it down until something was done."

Another reply brought out the details of Carnivale's telephone conversations regarding Giamari's murder.

"Carnivale said over the phone," La Salle said, "Hey, Mike, I've got that fellow over here and am ready to do that job. I've promised Tommy (Montimago) $300 and I have to get some money. Shall I come over to the office and get the money. We are going after him and I will show you that we will get him inside of a month."

"Didn't Carnivale ask Rofrano if he should go ahead with the job?" Mr. Stryker asked La Salle.

"He asked him for $300," was the reply, "and he told me when he got through talking that Rofrano was going to give him the money."

"Isn't it a fact that the defendant told you he and Rofrano had been on the outs for several years?"

"No, sir."

HARD LUCK.
(From the Philadelphia Bulletin.)
The Boss—Anybody call while I was out?
Office Boy—No, sir.
Boss—Then I'll have to go out again. I told Brown to call to-day and get his money.

PROSPECTIVE CITIZENS TOLD THEY MAY HAVE TO FIGHT HOME COUNTRY

Justice Kelby in Queens Warns
Them About the Oath
They Take.

Nearly seventy applicants for citizenship, together with their witnesses, were called into Part II. of the Supreme Court in Queens County by Justice Kelby this morning and the applicants were told that the oath of allegiance which they would have to take might require in the near future that they take up arms against the country in which they were born.

They were warned that if they had any mental reservation against performing their full duty as soldiers of the United States they should refuse to take the oath, because failure to perform their full duty would be treason.

The warning was given by Justice Kelby standing in front of a big American flag, which for the first time in the history of such proceedings was displayed in the courtroom.

The flag was so arranged that every applicant would have to stand facing it as he answered the questions put to him and took his oath of allegiance to the United States.

"In view of present conditions," said Justice Kelby, "I will not admit applicants unless I find that they have a full and clear understanding of the oath of allegiance and what it means."

If there is any applicant here who thinks that this oath permits him still to hold a part of allegiance to the country of his birth he must withdraw his application. A man can have but one wife and but one country.

"The present situation of affairs may mean that in the near future becoming a citizen may have important results. Under these circumstances this country must have the full allegiance of every one of its citizens. If we are to have war with another country the United States must have the same support from its naturalized citizens as it has from its native born citizens."

"SOUTHERN GENTLEMAN" HARD HIT BY COURT

Ex-District Attorney Merrill Gets Setback for Horsewhipping Man.

John B. Merrill, formerly District Attorney of Queens County, was instructed by Justice Crane in Brooklyn to-day that the "code of a Southern gentleman" has no standing in the Supreme Court of the State of New York, Second Department.

Merrill was in court to ask $15 a week alimony and $1,000 counsel fee from George T. Plant for Lillian M. Plant, who is suing for a separation.

Lawyer Eckelmaier, told Justice Scudder that Merrill, who is a big man, had horsewhipped Plant on the street in Woodhaven May 22.

"I am proud of that, sir," said Mr. Merrill. "I am a Southern gentleman. This man had made remarks reflecting on my honor and that of Mrs. Plant, and when I saw him I got a whip as quick as I could and whipped him soundly for five minutes, from 2.25 to 3.30. Under my code, I could not do otherwise."

"You are an officer of this court; you know the law; your code does not interest me; not one cent of counsel fee is allowed," snapped Justice Crane. Alimony was fixed at $7 a week and the children, at Plant's suggestion, were put in the care of his wife.

FIRE STIRS HUNDREDS IN BROOKLYN HOSPITAL

Employees of Kings County Institution Save Horses and Ambulances.

Several thousand patients and employees in the forty-seven buildings of the Kings County Hospital were aroused by fire in an ambulance stable 200 feet from the main hospital building at 3 o'clock this morning. Nurses and internes kept the patients calm.

The fire was discovered by ambulance drivers who sleep on the second floor of the stable building. A telephone alarm was given and the "whistle tower" sounded the general fire alarm of the hospital, indicating the building on fire by the number of blasts. That brought out 800 employees, acting in two companies, equipped with the fighting apparatus.

Dr. John F. Fitzgerald, Superintendent of the Hospital, led in the fight against the fire.

"We could have put it out with our own forces, too, but the water pressure was very poor," Dr. Fitzgerald said afterwards.

Why SAWTAY Is Better Than Cow-butter for Baking

Bake a cake with SAWTAY and one with cow-butter. Let them both stand for four or five days. The cow-butter cake will be dry, stale and with an odor of rancidity. The SAWTAY cake will be as fresh and sweet as the day you made it.

SAWTAY

100% PURE BUTTER-OF-NUTS FOR
FRYING — BAKING — SHORTENING

The taste in cow-butter is bacteria. After baking a cow-butter cake, the taste gets stronger until it is rancid. SAWTAY is neutral, without a taste, and will not turn rancid.

SAWTAY is economical—use one-fifth less than cow-butter.

Since it will not absorb an odor or flavor and therefore cannot impart one, SAWTAY may be used over and over, viz., fry onions, strain, then fry fish, strain, and use for baking the most delicate cake

Perfect Layers for Short Cake

1 cup gran. sugar, 1/2 cup SAWTAY, 2 eggs (beating out white of one for icing), 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1/2 cup milk, 2 cups flour, 1/2 teaspoon baking powder, 1/2 teaspoon salt. Cream sugar and SAWTAY, add eggs and vanilla, beat well. Add all the milk, then flour, baking powder and salt. Stir as little as possible so you add flour. Bake about fifteen minutes in moderate oven. Make in two layers.

SAWTAY Icing
1 cup powdered sugar, 1/2 cup SAWTAY, 1 gill of cream, pinch of salt. Beat to lather—orange, lemon, other, possible. Sift sugar and SAWTAY and beat until very creamy. Whip cream and add gradually, beating well all the time. Then add salt and flavoring.

SAWTAY Filling
1 cup powdered sugar, sifted two or three times, 1/2 cup SAWTAY. Cream sugar and SAWTAY well. Add flavoring. Rind of lemon and the juice of one-half orange or of lemon or 1/2 cup sherry wine.
